PREFACE.

In 1819, Manning Redfield of Manchester, N. Y., while on a pilgrimage to the home of his fathers, in Killingworth, Conn., instituted some inquiries into the history of his great grandfather, Theophilus Redfield, one of the early residents of that town. The facts thus collected, consisting of some incidents of personal history, a list of his children, with dates of their birth and death, and a list of the children of George Redfield, sixth son of Theophilus, were printed by Lewis H. Redfield of Syracuse, N. Y., in the same year, and by him circulated among some of the family. This little slip is believed to have been one of the earliest genealogical publications in this country.

In 1838 a copy of it fell into the hands of my father, William C. Redfield of New York City. Having always felt an interest in the early family history, and having already collected many facts concerning his own branch, he was led (with this slip as a foundation) to undertake to trace out the connection and lineage of all the various families bearing the name of Redfield. In this labor he was much aided by Richard W. Redfield and Justus S. Redfield, both residents of New York City—and the result of his active and persevering inquiries, was the publication in 1839 of a series of genealogical tables showing at a glance the descent and relationship of the various families of Redfield in the United States, so far as knowledge of them could be obtained. That so much information and so complete, should be collected and analyzed in so short a time, at a day when genealogical researches were neither common nor appreciated, is surprising, and illustrates that untiring diligence and that thoroughness of treatment which were still more strongly manifested in another and higher field of investigation. When Mr. R. began his work it was supposed that all the Redfields in the United States were the descendants of Theophilus Redfield of Killingworth, but, in the course of his inquiries, he met with several families who traced their origin to a stock in Fairfield, Conn. He found among them vague traditions of a connection between the Killingworth and Fairfield stocks, but all his efforts to ascertain the nature of this connection failed, and he was forced to content himself with a suggestion that Theophilus Redfield of Killingworth might have been a nephew of James Redfield of Fairfield.

Nearly a generation has passed away since the publication of the Genealogical Tables of 1839. Since that day further research has not only shown the actual relationship of the two stocks, but has enabled us to trace the family back still another generation, to the grandfather of Theophilus. It has also shown that the brief history of Theophilus, as given in the slip of 1819 and the work of 1839, must be modified in some particulars. In view of these facts, and actuated by a desire to correct some errors and supply some material omissions in the work of 1839, I have felt myself called upon to attempt a thorough revision of the whole family genealogy in the hopes of offering it in a more complete and detailed form which should also include the later generation. In the prosecution of this work I have had recourse to all available material. Having in my possession the correspondence on which was based the original tables, I have reëxamined it with care and scrutiny. I have transcribed from the town and ecclesiastical records of Killingworth, Clinton and Fairfield, all the entries referring to the family name—and have consulted the town and probate records of Cambridge, New London, Saybrook, New Haven, Guilford and Middletown, for requisite information. The moss-covered memorials of the ancient grave yards of Clinton, Killingworth, Fairfield and Middletown have not been neglected. Circulars have been sent as far as practicable to all the scattered representatives of the family, inviting information, and in many cases, personal inquiries instituted. The genealogical facts thus brought together are far more complete and specific than I at first permitted myself to expect. The old tables were defective in the enumeration of the descendants of the second and fourth sons of Theophilus. The last named branch was especially incomplete, and it is believed that the present work, in a measure, supplies these deficiencies. Yet I must lament that, notwithstanding all diligence, in the later generations will be found a few gaps which it has been impossible to fill. In some cases all clue has been lost by change of residence; in other instances, those to whom circulars have been addressed have failed to reply. This failure may perhaps be ascribed, in part, to an indifference to the subject, not unusual, yet I am happy to state, in this connection, that in a great majority of instances the circulars have met a ready response, oftentimes at the cost of much labor and time, and often with the most cheering expression of interest in the success of the undertaking.

While entire accuracy has been aimed at, and while I have avoided all statements, whether of fact or date, not based on good authority, I am well aware that errors, especially in regard to date, will occasionally be found. Only those who have been engaged in such inquiries can realize the perplexing discrepancies which constantly occur, not only between dates furnished by different members of the same family, but between different family records, between family and town records, and sometimes between town, ecclesiastical and probate records. In these cases of discrepancy I have decided, according to the best judgment I could form, probably not always rightly.

To follow out the descendants of the female lines would be an endless task, and one which would lead into genealogies properly belonging to families of other names, therefore no attempt has been made to follow the descendants of daughters beyond one generation. In other words, wherever the mother was a born Redfield, her children have been named, though they have not been designated by reference numbers.

To aid those who may desire to trace back their lineage, both on father and mother's side, I have, as far as possible, given the full name of the father and maiden name of the mother of each individual brought into the family by marriage. This feature will be serviceable to other genealogists in their labors, and a complete index of names will, I trust, add to its usefulness.

It is proper here to make acknowledgment to the various individuals who have kindly aided me in this task. I am under special obligations to Miss F. M. Caulkins, the accomplished historian of New London, who, to determine questions of identity and locality connected with the early history of the family, reexamined and transcribed all the passages of the original town records which could have a bearing upon the subject. It is mainly by her researches that we have been enabled to carry back the family history two generations beyond the tables of 1838. To the Hon. James Savage of Boston, I am indebted for many useful suggestions, and it is by a happy thought of his, confirmed by Francis Jackson, Esq., the historian of Newtown, Mass., that we have traced our progenitor to his first residence in the Bay Colony. Thanks are due to Henry Hull, Esq., the town clerk of Killingworth, for his kind assistance in the examination of the records of that town, and for important facts furnished from his personal knowledge. Dr. Alvan Talcott of Guilford, Conn., has transcribed and placed at my disposal a large store of genealogical facts gleaned from the records of Guilford and from other sources. To S. A. Nichols, town clerk of Fairfield, and to Dr. R. Blakeman, probate judge in the same town, and a careful antiquarian, I am under obligation for favors conferred. Finally, to my kinsmen, who have joined me in the circular of inquiry, or who have, in other ways, countenanced and aided me with information (oftentimes obtained and set forth with much pains), and who are too numerous to name, I present my sincere thanks.

JOHN H. REDFIELD.

INTRODUCTION.

Although the Redfield family in the United States, was undoubtedly introduced from England at the time of the Puritan emigration, still the name is very rare in Great Britain at the present day. It is not found in the London Directory, nor in those of Liverpool, Manchester, Birmingham, Edinburgh or Glasgow. Nor have we in our inquiries met with any positive testimony of its present existence beyond the Atlantic.* Yet there is sufficient historical evidence to show that names closely allied in etymological affinities were formerly to be found in England.

A William Redefeld is mentioned as holding an ecclesiastical position in 1213, in the reign of King John.†

Johannes de Grey de Retherfeld is named in certain deeds of enfeoffment of property in Oxfordshire in the reign of Edward III., 1327-1377,‡ and his name is still substantially preserved by a village in Oxfordshire called Rotherfield Grays. Rotherfield as a family name now occurs in England.

Roger of Redelingfeld is mentioned in the public records of Great Britain as holding various messuages in the county of Kent,|| and the Prioress of Redlingfeld or Redyngefeld in Suffolk, is often named in old land titles,§ and the name Redlingfield is still applied to a village in Suffolk.

Passing on to other names perhaps more likely to have relation to the ancient form of our patronymic, we find a manor in the hundred of Hineckford, county of Essex, which in 1378, bore the name of Redfanne, though now called Redfants,¶ and in Wiltshire, in the time of Edward I, we find a

* Among the papers of the late Wm. C. Redfield was found the following memorandum, probably made about 1843: "I am informed that a Dr. Thomas Redfield and his son resided at Beckington, Somersetshire, England, but has removed to some other place. I think a reference was made to Thomas Barter, 16 Wolcott Parade, Bath, as one likely to give information. This is the only instance in which I have heard of the name in England, except once hearing a statement that a Mr. Redfield, lately from Birmingham, England, was drowned soon after his arrival at New York, some thirty years ago." The compiler's efforts to follow up the clue indicated above, have not been successful.

William de Redefande. Rudfyn, Ruffyn, and Redfern are family names occasionally found in the public records.

In Burke's Encyclopedia of Heraldry, the name Redfield does not occur, but we find the following cognate names:

REDFERN. Or, six martlets gules three and three. Crest, A birch tree proper.

REDFIN. Argent on a fesse gules three fleurs de lys of the field.

REDFYNE. Argent a fesse gules between three fleurs de lys azure.

REDLEFELD. Paly of eight argent and gules: on a chief azure a lion passant guardant or.

The similarity of the arms above assigned to Redfin and Redfyne, seems to imply a close relation between the two, and they are doubtless but different forms of the same name. The name Redlefeld naturally suggests that of Redfield, and hence some of our kindred have too hastily assumed for our own family the arms assigned above to Redlefeld. But we think that the evidence which will presently be adduced, will show that the ancestor of the Redfields in the United States was probably not Redlefeld, but Redfin, and that the change to Redfield (not easily explained) did not take place till after the death of the first settler. The fact that this change occurred on this side of the Atlantic may explain the present rarity of the name of Redfield in England, though Redfin seems now to be quite as uncommon there. Redfern is not unfrequent now in England, and has some representatives in this country, but is probably a distinct family, as indicated by the armorial bearings just quoted.

Thorough research in England would probably contribute to further discoveries in relation to the transatlantic history of the family, and it is to be hoped that some one may yet have the opportunity and the disposition to perform this task, which has been out of our power.

In the United States, the name Redfield can hardly be called common, yet it has been borne by more than 1600 individuals, and not less than 500 families of the name now exist, distributed in almost every State and Territory of the Union, though chiefly in the Northern and Western States. All these, that have come to our knowledge, are certainly descended from James Redfield, who resided in Saybrook in 1676, and we can hardly doubt that he was the son of William Redfin, who settled near Boston as early as 1639.

In tracing the descent of the family, we assume this William Redfin to be the ancestor, and take him for the first generation. The grounds of this position will appear as we proceed. Should our conclusions be deemed unsatisfactory by any, the chain of genealogical succession from the second generation will still be unimpaired; and if the James Redfield from whom we all unquestionably descend, be not identical with James, the son of William Redfin, then there is no evidence whatever that the last mentioned James had any descendants.

EXPLANATIONS.

The arrangement herein adopted is substantially that now in general use for works of a similar character. The system of numbering, which is to serve for a clue through all the affiliations and ramifications of the family tree, is also that more generally employed. To those who are not familiar with it, it may be necessary to say, that all bearing the name of Redfield are numbered in order in the left margin, and where any of them have families, the same numbers are repeated for them as heads of families, in the same order in the center of the page. The numbers in parenthesis after heads of families, refer to preceding heads of families from whence they descend. This system of notation makes it easy to trace any branch of the family, either in a descending or ascending line. For instance, William Redfin is numbered 1, and his son James is numbered 4 in the margin. By looking for 4 in its proper order in the body of the page, James Redfield's family history is found, where his son Theophilus bears No. 8 in the margin. If 8 is sought for in its proper order in the body of the page, there the history of Theophilus's family will be found, and so on. Or if we wish to trace any family upwards, the process is reversed, thus—Amasa Angell Redfield, numbered in the margin 1346, is the son of Luther Redfield, who is numbered 592 in the body of the page. By running back along the marginal figures to 592, we find Luther enumerated as son of Luther Redfield, sr., who is numbered 221 in body of the page. Referring again to the margin for this number, we find the father of Luther Redfield, sr., and continuing the same method soon trace back to No. 1.

In reckoning the successive generations the children of the first settler are called the second generation, and so on. To readily distinguish between individuals of different generations, a different type is employed for each generation, thus :

- First Generation, William Redfield.
- Second Generation, James Redfield.
- Third Generation, THEOPHILUS REDFIELD.
- Fourth Generation, Daniel Redfield.
- Fifth Generation, Daniel Redfield.
- Sixth Generation, Ebenezer Redfield.
- Seventh Generation, WILLIAM H. REDFIELD.
- Eighth Generation, ALFRED B. REDFIELD.
- Ninth Generation, Caroline Redfield.

In the later generations, subdivisions are employed which will also facilitate reference.

Previous to 1752 the English legal year began with 25th March, though the change to January 1st as the beginning of the year, adopted by Catholic nations in 1582, had been gradually gaining ground. To prevent confusion between the two styles, it became usual to write all dates occurring between January 1 and March 25 with double year, thus: Feb. 22, 173 $\frac{1}{2}$, meaning that the year under the old style would still be 1731, while by the new style it would be 1732.

Under the new style another change also took place, by which ten days should be added to all dates previous to 1700, and 11 days to those between 1700 and 1752. In this work the dates are taken as found in the records, and no attempt has been made to reduce the earlier ones to new style. Those subsequent to 1752 are of course in new style.

The following abbreviations are occasionally employed :

b. for born.

d. for died.

bapt. for baptized.

dau. for daughter.

m. for married.

ch. for child or children,

unm. for unmarried.

REDFIELD GENEALOGY.

First Generation.

William Redfin, or REDFEN, or REDFYN, or REDFYNE, as it is variously rendered in the uncertain orthography of the early records, was probably one of the early emigrants from England to the Colony of Massachusetts. He was a man of moderate means, perhaps master of some mechanical handicraft, and we may reasonably suppose him to have been one of that large body of England's yeomanry, who, actuated by the combined motives of dread of the increasing encroachments of kingly and ecclesiastical power, doubt of the issue of the fearful struggle then approaching, and the hope of bettering their worldly condition, left the Old England for the New, during the decade of years which followed 1630. The year of his arrival is unknown, but as early as 1639, and perhaps earlier, he occupied a house and four acres of land on the south side of Charles River, about six miles from Boston. He was one of the first settlers on that side of the river. The location can be readily identified, and is not far from the foot of Nonantum Hill, on which Eliot, the Indian apostle, a few years later, first preached the gospel of Christ to the sachem Waubun and his people. It was near the north-westerly corner of what is now the town of Brighton, sloping from Nonantum to the meadows of Charles River, and afforded a fine view eastward toward Boston and its vicinity. His dwelling house and land were confirmed to him on the Records of the Proprietors of Cambridge in 1642, and the same records show that in Sept., 1646, he sold his place to Edward Jackson.* Henceforth his name disappears from Massachusetts. With Cary Latham* and others of his neighbors, he probably followed the

* Records of the Proprietors of Cambridge. Jackson's History of Newtown, pp. 9, 23. In the latter work Redfen is erroneously quoted Redsen. Mr. Jackson relied upon Puige's copy of the Proprietors' records, which is, in this instance, at fault—the f having been mistaken for the long f. The name occurs three or four times in the original records, and a close inspection of each instance will leave no doubt that the name intended is Redfen. See Appendix A.

* Cary Latham sold his property in Cambridge in Aug., 1646, three weeks before William Redfin sold his, but had already embarked in the New London enterprise, and afterwards became one of the most prominent men of that town.

stream of migration which, under the auspices of the younger Winthrop, was now directed from Massachusetts towards the fair river and harbor of Pequot, or as it was afterwards called, New London, in the jurisdiction of the Connecticut Colony. But though the first settlement in Pequot was made in 1646, we have no positive evidence of William Redfin's presence there till about 1653. Jonathan Brewster,* one of the earliest settlers at Pequot, had established a trading house with the Mohegan Indians, at a point on the east side of the river, opposite to their principal settlement. At this place (which is still called by his name, Brewster's Neck, and lies upon the north side of Poquetannuck Cove, about seven miles north of the present city of New London, in the present town of Ledyard), Brewster having obtained title from Uncas, the Mohegan chief, laid out for himself a large farm. Here William Redfin built himself a house, probably about 1653, at the solicitation, perhaps, of Brewster himself, for on the 29th May, 1654, Brewster conveyed to him "ten acres of arable land lying at Munhegan, of the plane of said Brewster's land and on the north side thereof, &c., with the ground whereon the said Redfin hath built a house, with a small garden thereto belonging, already fenced in."

His family at this time consisted of his wife Rebecca, daughters Lydia, Rebecca and Judith, and son James. Lydia was married in the following year to Thomas Bayley of New London.

In April, 1657, William Redfin bought of Richard Houghton a parcel of land, containing four acres, more or less, with a stone house upon it. This was situated on the western side of the river, north of the present city of New London, west of the present road between New London and Norwich. To this purchase the town added a grant of six acres in the rear, and he probably removed to this new location, which was contiguous to the residence of his son-in-law. His death took place about April or May, 1662, and was probably not unexpected, for in March of that year he had conveyed his house to Thomas Roach, who had married his daughter Rebecca, and on the 1st of April he had provided for his son by apprenticing him in the trade of tanner.

His widow Rebecca survived him, how many years we know not. In June, 1663, she applied to the town for a grant of a certain piece of land containing six acres, which was made to her in September of that year. This land she sold in December, 1666. The last record of her is in 1667.

We have thus far spoken of this family as bearing the name of Redfin, and so it is written (though with varying orthography) both in the records of Cambridge, and in the records of New London previous to 1662; but while the family resided in the latter town, the name seems gradually to have assumed the form of Redfield. Whether this was a corruption arising from a carelessness in pronunciation not uncommon at that day, or was a voluntary change, it is not now easy to determine. The evidence of the change is however conclusive, and sufficient to satisfy the most cautious and critical antiquarians.*

*Jonathan Brewster was a son of Elder William Brewster, who landed at Plymouth from the Mayflower in December 1620. Jonathan's wife Lucretia came over with her father-in-law in the Mayflower, but her husband had remained behind in Holland, and followed them in the next vessel, the Fortune, which arrived Nov. 2, 1621. See Caulkins's New London, pp. 65, 66, 276.

Second Generation.

Lydia Redfin, or REDFIELD, eldest daughter of William (1), was married at New London, January 10, 165 $\frac{5}{6}$, to THOMAS BAYLEY† of that town. He was a soldier under Lothrop, and was slain by the Indians in the combat at Bloody Brook, Mass., September 18, 1675. His widow married, in 1676, William Thorne from Dorsetshire, Old England. It is not known whether she had any children by the latter.‡

 3. JOHN BAYLEY, born April —, 1661.
 4. WILLIAM BAYLEY, born April 17, 1664.
 5. JAMES BAYLEY, born Sept. 26, 1666.
- } Each left descendants.

* See Appendix B.

† The entry of this marriage upon the records of New London, reads thus: "1655, Thomas Bayley was married to Lyddia the daughter of James Redfin, the 10th of January." That there is a clerical error here, and that for James we should read William, is evident from the following considerations: Thomas Bayley had a grant of land made him in 1657. In the description of its bounds, it is said to lie "over against his father's land at Mohengan." This undoubtedly means father-in-law, for frequent instances occur in the same records where the word father is thus used. No other Bayley had any grant of lands at that time. Moreover when this Bayley grant was afterwards sold, it is described as being nigh the Redfield land. But no James Redfield or Redfin had any grant of lands recorded in New London, nor does his name appear as buyer or seller, grantor or grantee of any lands within its bounds. This correction, which is suggested by Miss Caulkins, disposes of the supposed elder James Redfield alluded to in her History of New London, p. 279, and adds greatly to the probability that James, the son of William Redfin, is identical with the James Redfield, afterwards recorded in other places.

‡ Miss Caulkins's History of New London, pp. 290, 291.

6. JOSEPH BAYLEY, born — — —.

7. LYDIA BAYLEY, baptized August 3, 1673, married Andrew Lester.

3.

Rebecca Redfin, or REDFIELD, second daughter of William (1), was married at New London, Dec. 12, 1661, to THOMAS ROACH, a seaman from Block Island, who had come to New London as early as 1651. In March, 166 $\frac{1}{2}$, Roach bought of his father-in-law William Redfin, the house and lot which the latter had bought of Richard Houghton, with the land adjoining which had been granted to Redfin by the town. Roach's wife Rebecca died August 16, 1670. We have no record of any children. He was living as late as 1708.*

James Redfin, or REDFIELD, only son of William (1), bound himself to Hugh Roberts of New London, April 1, 1662, for five years, "to learn the art and trade of tanning." The indenture was made with consent of his parents, and signed by himself, his father and Hugh Roberts, and was witnessed by Gershom Bulkley and Lucretia Brewster, and there is reason to believe it was executed during his father's last sickness. We may presume that his age at the time of his indenture was about sixteen years. Before his five years of service had expired, to wit, in 1666, Mr. Roberts broke up his establishment in New London, sold out and afterwards removed to Newark, N. J. The young apprentice thus probably became free, and in October, 1666, the name appears on the New London rate list, estimated at a low figure (£3 0s. 2d.). It is not on the list of 1667 (the only other early one preserved), hence we infer that he had left the place, and the New London records afford no evidence of his further residence there; but in May, 1669, James Redfield was married at New Haven to Elizabeth How, who was born in 1645, daughter of Jeremy How† of New Haven, who was a son of Edward How, one of the first settlers of Lynn, Mass. For a year or so he must have continued a resident of New Haven, for in May, 1670, the birth of a daughter is recorded there. In what occupation he was at this time employed there is no evidence, and henceforth the archives of New Haven are also silent respecting him, but in the year following (1671) the name appears among the inhabitants of Tisbury, Martha's Vineyard‡. When we remember that New London was, at that period, one of the principal seaports of New England, and that its young men very naturally took to the sea, that both father and uncle of his wife were mariners and he himself evidently of a roving disposition, it is quite probable that young Redfield may have gratified the restlessness of youth by an occasional coasting voyage, or may have even sailed as far as Barbadoes, with which island a large trade was then carried on. This, however, is but conjecture; nor do we meet the name again till 1676. In July of that year a James Redfield was living at Saybrook with wife and children, and also a servant man (perhaps a journeyman or apprentice) and was exercising the vocation of weaver. At this time the troubles with the Indians (known as King Philip's war) rendered Saybrook of some importance as a military post, and the fort and garrison buildings near the mouth of the Connecticut had been rebuilt or repaired. The successes of the colonists against the Narragansetts, during the summer of 1676, were such as to show that no large garrison would be needed at Saybrook, and hence Capt. Robert Chapman, under whose command the fort had been placed, wrote to the Council at Hartford to inform them that "the fort-house, together with the fortification, was near finished," and to ask their will and pleasure whether to put it under charge of a small garrison, or to place only a family to live there. Should the latter be thought advisable, he recommends James Redfield as a suitable person.* Whether the Council acted on this recommendation is not known, but it is probable they did. At any rate, Redfield afterwards appears as still residing at Saybrook, for in Dec. 1683, the town granted him an acre of land on Pipe Staves Point, to which another acre was granted in 1686.† This location was very near the fort, and was upon the same point of land and † See Appendix D. The origin of this name, "Pipe Staves Point," is explained by the following orders passed by the General Court of Connecticut, in 1641:

After ordaining the standard size for pipe staves, and providing for the appointment of an probably very near the now lonely field where the monument to Lady Alice Butler still stands solitary.

How long he resided at Saybrook we can not tell. The Saybrook records of births and deaths are silent respecting his family, and yet it is probable that in addition to "the children" above mentioned, at least one other was born to him in this town, to wit, his son Theophilus in 1682, and we may presume that his wife Elizabeth died before he removed elsewhere. However this may be, it is certain that he removed to Fairfield, Conn., as early as 1693, and probably earlier. There he married a second time. His wife was DEBORAH, daughter of JOHN STURGES or STURGIS, who was a freeman of Fairfield as early as 1660, and a prominent man in the community. His residence was near Hyde's Pond, which is near the main road through Fairfield, not far from the present rail road station.

In 1713, James Redfield visited his son THEOPHILUS (who, as we shall see, had established himself at Killingworth) and made over to him the little plot of ground at Saybrook, which we have already mentioned.* On the 10th Feb., 171⁸/₉, James and his wife Deborah conveyed their property at Fairfield to their son JAMES, for his encouragement to continue with and help them in their old age. In the following month James's son-in-law, John Seeley, quit-claimed his interest, and in January, 172⁰/₁, his daughter Sarah and her husband Daniel Frost, likewise released their interest in the same property.† We can not assign the date of the death of James Redfield or of his wife Deborah. The former probably occurred before 1723.‡

Inspector of slaves in each town, the order proceeds "and all such parcels so approved and sealed, shall pass to the merchant at £5 the thousand, to be delivered at the river's mouth, at which place the Country hath undertook to provide for Mr. Hopkins, by the beginning of June next, 70,000, viz: Wethersfield, 30,000; Windsor, 20,000; Hartford, 20,000; if Mr. Hopkins can provide shipping and afford to give that price"—Trumbull's Colonial Records of Conn., I. 68.

† For these several instruments see Appendix F.

‡ In the above statement it is assumed that the scattering allusions to James Redfield which can be gleaned from the old records, all relate to one and the same person. This view of the subject is more consistent with probabilities than any other, since with perhaps one exception, it harmonizes every fact which has been brought to light. The chain of connective evidence from 1676 downward is beyond question, and the only difficulty which arises is to explain how the tanner's apprentice of 1662, should appear as a weaver in 1676. We think this difficulty disappears on examination. It is certain that the tanner boy's apprenticeship was not completed, owing to the change of residence of Hugh Roberts, to whom he had been bound, and there is no evidence of his afterwards working at his early avocation. That a young man, without the capital necessary to carry on what usually became a lucrative trade, and brought up in a community where a large portion of the youth sought their fortune upon the sea, should quit the occupation he had first embraced, should enter upon a roving life and finally settle down in the practice of a calling which (as then carried on) required little capital or skill, is not at all strange. If, on the other hand, we assume the James Redfield of Saybrook to be a different person from the New London James Redfield, then we have the remarkable coincidence of a family name so rare that it is now almost or quite unknown in Great Britain, yet borne at the same early period of our colonial history

Judith Redfin or REDFIELD, third daughter of William, married at New London, June 17, 1667, ALEXANDER PYGAN of Norwich, Old England. The widowed mother seems not to have looked with favor upon Mr. Pygan's suit, for the records of the County Court of New London, a little previous, show that "Alexander Pygan was complained of by Widow Rebecca Redfin, for enticing away her daughter's affections, contrary to the laws of this corporation." Mr. Pygan had arrived the year previous and was a tanner by trade. On his first arrival in the plantation he was regarded as rather a lawless young man of "passionate and distempered carriage," but under the restraints and influences by which he was surrounded, he became a discreet and useful member of the community. His wife Judith died April 30, 1678.

Children.

2. JANE PYGAN, born Feb. —, 167⁰₁, married, in 1694, Jonas Green, ship master, of New London; had son Samuel and perhaps others.

by two young men of about the same age, and living in the sea port towns of the same colony, though never both found in the same place at one time—a hypothesis which takes far too much for granted. At any rate if the New London James is a different man from him of Saybrook, then there is no further trace of the former or of his family, for all of the name since known, descend, as has already been mentioned, from the latter. Hence if we are wrong in the ground we have taken, it will invalidate none of "the succession" after 1676.

* The year of Sarah Redfield's birth is unknown, and it is perhaps doubtful whether she was by the first or second wife. The rank above assigned her is favored by the fact that James Redfield had more than one child living in 1676, and that Sarah is not mentioned on the baptismal record of Fairfield; yet this latter point is not conclusive, since there are no baptismal entries on the ecclesiastical records earlier than 1694. The early town registry of Fairfield is very defective and probably one volume is lost. Except two or three pages found at the end of the 1st Vol. of Deeds, there is nothing of earlier date than 1720.

After the death of this wife Mr. Pygan lived a few years at Saybrook, where he had a shop of goods and was licensed by the County Court as inn keeper. He married there his second wife, April 15, 1684, Lydia, widow of Samuel Boyes, and daughter of William and Lydia [Danforth] Beamond of Saybrook, by whom he had a daughter Lydia, who married Rev. Eliphalet Adams of New London.*

SARAH REDFIELD, second daughter of James (4), son of William (1), was married to DANIEL FROST, son of Daniel and Mary Frost of Fairfield, and great grandson of William Frost, one of the first settlers of Fairfield, who died in 1644, and whose will is recorded in Trumbull's Col. Records of Connecticut, I, 465. Daniel Frost died in 1725. On the 8th Dec. of that year, Sarah Frost was appointed administratrix of the estate of her deceased husband.

Child.

Mrs. Frost was probably married a second time, to Abner Fitch of Norwalk, for on the 3d Feb. 1728, Daniel Frost, son of Daniel Frost, deceased, late of Fairfield, made choice of his father-in-law, Abner Fitch of Norwalk, Conn., as his guardian.

THEOPHILUS REDFIELD, oldest son of James (4), son of William (1), was a joiner by trade, and probably settled in Killingworth, Conn., soon after becoming of age.† The first mention of him on the records of that town is in March, 1704⁴/₅, when he bought a small piece of ground for a homestead in what was then Killingworth, but which has since been set off by

† In the genealogical table, prepared by Manning Redfield in 1819, it is stated that "Theophilus Redfield was born in England and came to America as an adventurer by the way of the West Indies in 1704." This statement was copied into the genealogy of 1839. The details already given of James Redfield's history, sustained as they are by the documentary evidence presented in the Appendix, show that this account can hardly be true. On what it was based can not now be ascertained, but it was probably on family tradition—a most uncertain authority. Theophilus's father may perhaps have made a voyage or two to Barbadoes, though of this we find no positive evidence, or Theophilus himself after attaining to majority may have made a voyage thither, which would be sufficient ground for such a tradition. Where Theophilus was born is not known, though the probabilities are that it was Saybrook.

On the 24th Dec., 1706, he married PRISCILLA GREENEL (or GRINNELL), then aged 17, dau. of Daniel and Lydia Greenel who three years before had settled in that part of Saybrook, then called Pochaug, now Westbrook. Daniel Greenel came from Little Compton, R. I. (then called Seaconnet), was a son of Daniel Greenel of that place, and probably a grandson of Matthew Greenel who was in Portsmouth, R. I., in 1638.*

For several years after his marriage, THEOPHILUS REDFIELD continued to reside in the southern part of the town, but about 1717 or 1718 he bought a tract of land of about 120 acres on Chestnut Hill in North Killingworth, within that part of the town to which the name of Killingworth is now restricted. Chestnut Hill is an elevated ridge of land, about a mile and a half west of Killingworth church, extending north and south for nearly two miles between the forks of the Hammonasset river, and commanding a beautiful and extensive view both east and west. Daniel Greenel came from Little Compton, R. I. (then called Seaconnet), was a son of Daniel Greenel of that place, and probably a grandson of Matthew Greenel who was in Portsmouth, R. I., in 1638.*

For several years after his marriage, THEOPHILUS REDFIELD continued to reside in the southern part of the town, but about 1717 or 1718 he bought a tract of land of about 120 acres on Chestnut Hill in North Killingworth, within that part of the town to which the name of Killingworth is now restricted. Thither he removed and resided for the remainder of his life. This property seems for the most part to have been retained among the descendants, and at least four families of the name still reside on Chestnut Hill.

Though never called to take a very prominent part in public affairs there is evidence that Mr. Redfield commanded the respect and esteem of the community in which he lived. He was frequently appointed on important committees in the management of town affairs, and at a day when military titles, however humble, had some weight, was known as "Sergeant Redfield."

He died on the 14th February, 1759, in the 77th year of his age.† His wife Priscilla survived him eleven years and died Jan. 12th, 1770, aged 81.

* Though Mr. Greenel's ancestor was certainly an early immigrant to the colonies, we find no evidence that he was one of Dr. Robinson's Leyden congregation as stated in the old genealogy. There is a tradition in the family that it is of Huguenot origin, and took refuge in England after the massacre of St. Bartholemew. Seaconnet, where Daniel Greenel's father settled, was not Cape Cod, as stated in the old work, but the point of land on the east of Narragansett Bay, now called Little Compton.

† Theophilus Redfield's grave stone is still standing, in good preservation, in the old yard about a mile and a half south of Chestnut Hill. The inscription reads

22. 12. Jane Redfield, born June 24, 1733.
23. 13. James Redfield, born March 29, 1735.

These children all lived to be married, and all had families, and from the stock of THEOPHILUS are descended nine-tenths of those bearing the name.

MARGARET REDFIELD, third daughter of James (4), son of William (1), is supposed to have married JOHN SEELEY of Newtown, Conn. He was probably a resident of Stratford between 1691 and 1710, and as early as 1712 removed to Newtown. He was living in 1719, when he executed a release to his brother-in-law, JAMES REDFIELD. As Seeley's wife is not named in that instrument, it is to be inferred that she was then deceased.

It is not known whether there were any children.

JAMES REDFIELD, second son of James (4), son of William (1), resided in Fairfield, Conn. He appears to have been thrice married; 1st about 1725, to SARAH —; 2d, about 1727, to MARY —; and 3d, about 1742, to SARAH —. He died in 1743, and his widow administered on the estate. Inventory, £815 14s 9d. She was living as late as 1779.

* Whether John Seeley's wife was Margaret or another daughter of James Redfield, of whom we have no record, we have not been able to determine. But as we know there was a daughter Margaret it is unnecessary to suppose another, in the absence of positive testimony.

Daniel Redfield, eldest son of THEOPHILUS (8), son of James (4), resided at Clinton,† Conn. He recognized the Church covenant in 1725, and about 1728 he married ELIZABETH ——. In May, 1746, he was commissioned as ensign in the third company of the regiment under command of Col. Many of the descendants of Daniel Redfield, both in the male and female line, still reside in Clinton, Conn.

Elizabeth Redfield, eldest daughter of THEOPHILUS (8), son of James (4), recognized covenant with Killingworth church in 1725. She was the daughter of Josiah Hull of Killingworth, February 3, 1731¹. After her death Family 12, JOSIAH HULL was son of Thomas and Hannah [Shether] Hull, and grandson of Josias Hull, one of the early settlers of Killingworth, who was probably son of George Hull, who settled first at Dorchester in 1630, and afterwards at Windsor.

Ebenezer Redfield, third son of THEOPHILUS (8), son of James (4), was a sea captain and resided in Clinton. He recognized church covenant in 1731, and on the 30th November, 1741, he married HANNAH COLTON, probably daughter of Daniel Colton of Guilford. On the 4th January, 1766, his house took fire, and in the effort to save one of his children from the flames, he was so badly burned as to cause his death in a few hours. He was 53 years of age at the time of his death. Letters of administration were granted to his widow, Hannah, February 2, 1768. The inventory of his estate was £1,161 19s. 10d.

He died August 10, 1752, and his widow Lydia was married Nov. 15, 1753, to LEVI LEETE, son of Benjamin Leete. She died December 16, 1784, aged 68 years. Theophilus Redfield, fourth son of THEOPHILUS (8), son of James (4), resided at Chestnut Hill, Killingworth. He recognized church covenant March 17, 1736. He was a sergeant in the company commanded by his brother Peleg, which formed part of the provincial forces which engaged in the campaigns of 1759 and 1760, and was an ensign in the same company in 1761 (See Peleg Redfield, 18). Peleg Redfield, fifth son of THEOPHILUS (8), son of James (4), resided at Killingworth. He married, April 25, 1744, SARAH DUDLEY, born April 20, 1723, daughter of Ebenezer and Elizabeth [Graves] Dudley, of Guilford.

In 1756, he was appointed 2d Lieut. in the 10th company of the second Connecticut regiment, raised for the campaign against the French possessions in North America. In 1758 he again served as 1st Lieut. in the same regiment, in the campaign in which Ticonderoga was lost, and Lord Howe slain. In the spring of 1759 he received a commission as captain, and took command of a company of ninety men, which he had raised in and about Killingworth, ordered on board Capt. Selleck's privateer, and served there six weeks, and were then discharged without pay. The council ordered the services in said privateer to be paid for."—Hinman's Services of Connecticut in the Revolution, p. 250.

Letters of administration on PHILIP REDFIELD'S estate, were granted to his brother Levi, April 4, 1780. The estate, consisting mostly of land in Killingworth, and at Buck Hill, Guilford, was divided among his brothers Eliakim, Levi, Constant, Elias, Nathan and sister Mrs. Bristol.

as a part of the contingent of 5,000 men which Connecticut undertook to furnish for that year, for the prosecution of the war against the French in Canada. Capt. Redfield's company formed part of the second regiment under Col. Nathan Whiting, the whole Connecticut forces being placed in command of Major Gen. Lyman. These forces were raised with prompt dispatch and sent at once to Gen. Amherst, the British commander. By the end of May they had reached the head quarters at Albany. The division of Amherst was among the first to open the campaign. In July he passed Lake George without opposition, and on the 27th of that month, Ticonderoga was, without resistance, abandoned to the superior forces of the provincials, and the French retreated to Crown Point. On the 1st August, they abandoned the latter post and retreated to Isle aux Noix. Amherst then ordered Capt. Loring to build vessels, to aid in driving the enemy from the lake, and employed the army in restoring the partially demolished fortresses of Ticonderoga and Crown Point. Meanwhile Niagara was taken by Gen. Prideaux, in July, and Montcalm was defeated by Wolfe before the walls of Quebec. In 1760, Connecticut again raised 5,000 men under the same officers as before, and Capt. Redfield's company still found employment. In June, Gen. Amherst began his march from Schenectady to Oswego, reached the lake shore in about three weeks, crossed Lake Ontario in open boats and rude galleys, forced the passage of the St. Lawrence by taking Fort Oswegatchie, and reached Montreal in September, where the three divisions of the army were united, and two days afterwards it surrendered, bringing a close to the campaign. On his return from this campaign, Capt. Redfield was taken sick of small pox at Albany, and died on his journey home, near Stockbridge, Mass., Dec. 5, 1760.*

Letters of administration were granted to his widow, Sarah Redfield, Jan. 6, 1761. Estate inventoried £324 ls. 9d. His widow married Noah Isbell, January 2, 1775.

* Hollister's History of Connecticut. See Appendix I and J. The amount of men and money furnished by the little colony of Connecticut, throughout the whole course of this "old French war," is most remarkable, and not the less so, that the people by their own Legislature cheerfully and repeatedly assumed the burden. And it was the fact that this free expenditure of blood and treasure by the colonists, met with such ill requital on the part of the mother country, that did much to strengthen the arm, and nerve the resolution of the men of Connecticut and Massachusetts, in that after contest, for which the Canadian campaign proved a fitting school. In 1776, Connecticut had 20,000 men in actual service, most of whom had been marched out of the State in defense of New York.

William Redfield, seventh son of THEOPHILUS (8), son of James (4), in early life resided at Guilford, Conn., and was a sea captain. He married January 8, 1755, at Middletown, Conn., ELIZABETH STARR, daughter of Samuel and Elizabeth [Jarcie] Starr.* He removed to Middletown, where his children were all born, and where he spent the remainder of his life. He dwelt on High street, and his house and garden occupied part of the present site of the Wesleyan University. In 1777, July 1, he was appointed issuing Commissary to the battalions raised in Connecticut for continental service.† Subsequently he kept an inn and at one time had charge of the jail. He is described as a man of warm and genial disposition, a great reader and a cultivator of fine fruit, and all these points rendered his house a favorite resort for young people. He died in July, 1813, in the 86th year of his age, having outlived all his twelve brothers and sisters. He was buried in the "old yard by the river" in Middletown, but no stone marks the spot. His wife died about 1800. His four sons all became seamen.

* Samuel Starr was third son of Joseph, the second son of Comfort, the second son of Dr. Thomas, the oldest son of Dr. Comfort Starr, who immigrated in 1635.

* This family was one of those who suffered from the brutalities of the British soldiers under the infamous Gen. Tryon, at the time of the plunder and burning of Fairfield, July 7, 1779. Mr. Redfield was away from home, but in the house were his aged mother, his wife Lucretia, and a child. A party of the enemy with three officers came to the house and ordered it to be fired, alleging that one of their men had just before been taken prisoner in the vicinity. Mrs. Redfield by exertions, succeeded in extinguishing the fire, although the burning was four times attempted. During the night the British soldiers roamed through the village without the slightest control from their officers, and three of them entered the house of Mrs. Redfield, where they destroyed the furniture, ransacked and plundered the house, and rifled the pockets of the inmates. Even the gray hairs of Mr. Redfield's widowed mother did not protect her from plunder and gross insult, and her daughter-in-law, Mrs. Lucretia, was only saved from shameful violence, by the opportune entrance of two men, one of whom stated that he had been a prisoner in that town, and had experienced civility and kindness from its inhabitants. These men remained and protected the family through the remainder of the night.

The committee which was afterwards appointed to estimate the losses sustained by the inhabitants of Fairfield, by conflagration and plunder on this occasion, reported the loss of

The spirit of the gospel which is love, charity and kindness, seemed to be active in her, whilst she guided her affairs with discretion. She was ready to do good and lend, to disperse and give to the poor. It will be difficult to find her equal in charitable acts to the distressed. She hath gone abroad and continued nights and days together with sick and distressed families, to wait on them, watch with them, and minister to them. I have seen her as far from her own home as my parish, tending and taking care of a sick and distressed family, a day and a night at a time, when most of the people stood afar off, lest they should be infected by the sickness that so distressed that family." whigs of Guilford, exasperated by some tory outrages, and by the belief that some of the inhabitants of the town were secretly inclined to favor the royal cause, started out one evening to search the houses of the suspected. Whether it was because good Mrs. Amanda liked too well a good cup of tea, or whether there was other occasion to believe that Dr. Redfield's dwelling concealed illicit goods, we can not tell, but his dwelling was included in the number to be searched. The searching party seeing the Doctor's negro-man at the door, ordered him to get out of the way or he would be shot. He asked permission to call his master, who finding what was in the wind, came to the door armed with an empty vial, well corked, which he held up to the crowd, and in a most impressive manner declared that he had the small-pox bottled up in that vial, and that unless they would instantly leave the premises, peaceably and without disturbance, he should certainly open it and let out the disease upon them. No threat could have been more effective. The party decamped, heller skeller, and left the Doctor and his terrible vial unmolested.

7. Daniel Peck, born Dec. 4, 1786. See (382).
8. Julia Peck, July 10, 1790.

*This case affords a characteristic example of the progressive propensity of "the universal Yankee nation." Richard Redfield was born in Killingworth, Connecticut, went early to the town of Mendham, N. J., where he learned the trade of axe-making, of a Mr. Conger, and married his first wife. He then removed to Addison county, Vermont, and while in that county resided successively at Bridport, Middlebury, Shoreham and Vergennes; thence he removed to Madrid, St. Lawrence county, N. Y.; thence he crossed the St. Lawrence into Canada: thence to Ogdensburgh, N. Y.; thence to Elbridge, Onondaga county, N. Y.; thence to Sodus, Wayne county, N. Y.; thence to New Albany, Indiana; thence to Rushville, Illinois, where death gave him his last removal, March 26, 1851.

Levi Redfield, third son of Theophilus (16), son of THEOPHILUS (8), in 1762, at the age of 17, enlisted at Killingworth, in the Connecticut regiment under the command of Col. Putnam, which was destined to coöperate with the British army and fleet in an attack upon the Spanish possessions in the West Indies. His elder brother, Nathan, accompanied him.† The Connecticut forces consisted of 1,000 men, to which were joined 800 men from New York, and 500 from New Jersey, the whole commanded by Gen. Lyman. The expedition sailed from New York in June, 1762. Off the coast of Cuba a storm dispersed the fleet, and the transport, which carried Col. Putnam and 500 men, was wrecked upon an uninhabited key. They were afterwards relieved, and reached Havana in time to render essential aid in the conduct of the siege of that city. The regular forces had been engaged in the siege for some weeks, and were worn down with fatigue and sickness. The castle and city of Havana soon after capitulated, and in November, the provincial forces, or rather a sad remnant of them, returned to New York, the greater portion having perished from exposure and hardship, and consequent sickness.‡ Levi's elder brother, Nathan, died from fever on the homeward voyage, and he himself suffered from the disease. After Levi's return he devoted himself to instruction in sacred music, and married, July 3, 1765, SYBIL WILCOX, of Killingworth, born March 26, 1746.

On the breaking out of the revolution, he enlisted in the continental service, and served through several campaigns, as brigade drum major. After the war he resumed his profession of singing-master, removed into Vermont

* So in Killingworth town records, yet in the distribution of Eliakim Redfield's estate, in 1786, a share is given to "Rachel, third daughter." Perhaps the note "born and died same day," should have been appended to Roswell instead of Rachel, or there may have been another daughter named Rachel. If so, nothing more is known of her.

† The genealogy of 1838, states that "Levi, with three of his brothers" served in the campaign against Havana. This can hardly be true, for Isaac the fourth brother, was but 13 years of age in 1762. We have found the names of only Levi and Nathan on the pay-rolls in the State office at Hartford. See note on page 18. Our authority for many points in Levi's history, is found in a quaint and somewhat egotistical old pamphlet, entitled, "A succinct Account of some Memorable Events and Remarkable Circumstances in the Life of Levi Redfield, late of Connecticut, now residing in Brattleboro, Vermont. Written by Himself. From the Press of B. Smead, Brattleboro, 1798." The pamphlet is in possession of Mrs. Julia Blakesly, of Addison, Steuben Co., N. Y., a daughter of Levi Redfield, still living (1858), aged 89. (See No. 188.)

‡ As illustrating the frightful loss of life which this expedition occasioned, we quote from the Boston News Letter of December 30, 1762: "Of 18 soldiers that went from Hebron, Conn., 15 are dead, one sick at New York, one returned." The unfortunate provincials did not even receive the unsubstantial meed of glory; that, as was then usual, being mostly claimed for the "regular" forces.

in 1784, and lived mostly at Brattleboro, though traveling often into other parts of the state, in the exercise of his vocation. He afterwards removed to Otego, Otsego county, N. Y., and thence to Bainbridge, N. Y., where he died September 15, 1838, aged 93 years. His wife Sybil died in Killingworth, July 3, 1827, aged 81 years.

Martha Redfield, second daughter of Theophilus (16), son of THEOPHILUS (8), was married, February 9, 1775, to CALEB TURNER. She probably died before 1780, since she was omitted in the distribution of her brother Philip's estate, and probably left no children.

Nathan Redfield, eighth and youngest son of Theophilus (16), son of THEOPHILUS (8), resided first at Guilford and afterwards at New Haven, Conn. He was a musician in the Revolutionary army, and was custom-house officer at New Haven 1812 to 1814. He married, October 29, 1789, RUTH BENTON, born at Guilford, June 10, 1767, daughter of Deacon Noah and Ruth [Dickinson] Benton. 75.

Peleg Redfield, fifth son of George (19), son of THEOPHILUS (8), entered into the Connecticut Line as a musician (fifer) in 1777, being then in his sixteenth year. His first campaign was made under Capt. Josiah Baldwin, his second (that of 1778) under Capt. Stanton of Salisbury, Conn. In 1779 he served under Capt. Granger of Suffield. From 1780 until March, 1782, he served under Capt. Lockwood, whose company formed part of Gen. Waterbury's brigade. He assisted in what defense was made to save New Haven from the marauding expedition under Tryon and Garth, in July, 1779, and saw the flames arising from the burning of East Haven. While under Capt. Lockwood's command, he was one of a detachment which was sent out in Jan., 1780,* with orders to cut off Delancy's dragoons and a band of tories under Col. Hatfield, who had their head quarters at Morrisania. Delancy and his dragoons were absent, but Col. Hatfield and eleven tories were taken, after a desperate resistance, with a large amount of booty. In 1781 his regiment lay at White Plains, in full view of the allied armies, and he saw them strike their tents for the purpose of joining Lafayette in the siege of Yorktown, while the brigade to which he belonged was ordered back to Connecticut to guard the coast from invasion and to watch the movements of the tories. In March, 1782, he enlisted to go to Fort Niagara, under a promise that every twenty men should receive a township of land in New York State, for three years' service. He remained at Salisbury until June of that year when he was discharged, the officer under whom he had enlisted having failed to procure a commission from the New York legislature. Peace was soon afterwards proclaimed, and he returned to Killingworth where he worked at his calling as shoemaker. He soon after removed to Suffield, Conn.,

* This expedition was sent off during that remarkable "cold term," which has rendered the winter of 1780 preëminent. The party were absent 36 hours, and in many places had to march through snow three feet in depth. Mr. R's foot was frozen on the march, and the effects remained with him to his death. Many other instances of privation, both as to food and raiment, are on record with his descendants, as related from his own lips, but can not be detailed here. They but add to the innumerable evidences which attest the sincerity of our fathers' faith in the "inalienable rights" of "all men."

PETER REDFIELD.

and married, July 5, 1787, MARY JUDD, the first daughter and child of Heman and Anna [Goodrich] Judd* of Farmington, Conn. While residing in Suffield he was neighbor to Hon. Oliver Phelps, who had recently become proprietor of a very large tract of land in Western New York. Induced by the favorable representations which Mr. Phelps made of the far off Genesee country, and by the offer of a choice of any 200 unsold acres of Phelps & Gorham's purchase, in exchange for his small property in Suffield, Mr. Redfield visited the region in 1799, and selected a tract about a mile west of the present village of Clifton Springs, in the town of Farmington (now Manchester), Ontario Co. Having cleared about three acres and erected the body of a log house he returned, and in February, 1800, he, with his wife and six children, performed upon a snow sled the tedious winter journey through what was in good part an unbroken wilderness. The usual hardships to which a pioneer family must always be exposed were cheerfully supported; hardships in which woman nobly bore her part. Bears and wolves sharply contested the ownership of the flocks and herds, and the thick forest had to be subdued by vigorous effort, before comfort and plenty could surround the new emigrants. Mr. Redfield lived to see that wilderness become a part of the garden of the west, and his sons the pioneer settlers of still more distant regions. He became a member of the Baptist church soon after his removal to Manchester, and maintained an honorable and consistent membership till his death. He was a life member of several benevolent associations supported by that denomination. His wife died October 25, 1844, aged 79 years. His own death was hastened by exposure while on an errand of beneficence, and took place May 26, 1852, at the age of 90 years.†

J., previous to Penn's settlement at Philadelphia, and one of them assisted in running the boundary line between Burlington and Gloucester. Her father was prisoner on board the Jersey prison ship at New York during the revolution; his family meanwhile suffering every privation by the plundering of the British and Hessians. On one occasion their lives were sustained by a barrel of potatoes which the mother had buried in the cellar to hide from the marauders. Ann being at this time an infant, had one of her cheeks frozen while the mother was trying to save a cow which the enemy drove off and slaughtered.

Peleg Redfield, fourth son of Capt. William (20), son of THEOPHILUS (8), when at about the age of 14, left home and joined an American privateer at New London. The privateer was soon after captured by a British frigate and carried to New York. His youth probably saved him from the horrors of the prison ships, and he was taken by a British officer for a servant. A dinner party on Long Island which the officer attended, accompanied by his Yankee serving-lad, gave the latter an opportunity for escape, of which he hastened to avail himself, and making his way up the island, he succeeded in crossing the Sound and reaching his home. He continued however to follow the sea as his profession through the most of his life. In 1788 he married ELIZABETH PRATT, daughter of Jonathan and Mary [Latham] Pratt,* of Staddle Hill, Middletown, and settled at South Farms, in the southern part of the township, where he died Sept. 10, 1802, in his 41st year. He was interred in the Liberty street burying ground at Middletown, near the north side, but no stone marks the spot. In 1804 his widow married Nathan Sears of South Farms, Middletown, and on the 1st of June, 1806, the family, consisting of his nine children and four of her younger ones, started with an ox team for that part of Ohio then called New Connecticut, and were until 25th July reaching their new home in Randolph, Portage Co. She died there February 2, 1825.

† Inscription on grave stone of Samuel Redfield, in old yard at Clinton, Conn.:

In Memory of
Capt. SAMUEL REDFIELD, 3d. (2d),
Who died March 15th, 1800, in the 34th year of his age.
Here these active limbs of mine,
Lie mouldering in the dust.
Some hearty friend may drop a tear
On my dry bones, and say :
These once were strong as mine appear,
And mine must be as they.
For dust and ashes loudest speak

line. The region was then a wilderness, far distant from the frontiers of civilization. The pair began housekeeping in a little log cabin, ten feet square, covered with bark. All their possessions were what they could carry on their backs, and for the first year they had barely enough to sustain life. Their corn was ground by pounding with a wooden pestle in a rude wooden mortar, hollowed from a log; until one day a traveler brought the glad news that a grist mill was in operation on the Lamoile river, about 15 miles distant. In due time the energy and toil of these pioneers brought the rewards of plenty, and they had surplus produce to dispose of. For this, Montreal was the nearest market, though distant 60 miles, and many family traditions are told of the perils encountered in crossing the St. Lawrence, in the wintry thaws, for this object.

Peleg Redfield, second son of Beriah (64), son of Capt. Peleg (18), studied medicine with Dr. Samuel Ware of Conway,* Mass., and commenced practice at Wethersfield, Vt. At this place he married, April 5, 1803, HANNAH PARKER, born Nov. 27, 1788, eldest child of Isaac Parker, merchant of Wethersfield, Vt. In February, 1806, he removed his family to Coventry, on the northern border of Vermont—then an outpost of civilization. "His practice immediately became extensive and arduous. His journeys to the scattered cabins in which his patients resided were performed mainly on horseback, but not unfrequently he was obliged to thread his way through the forests on foot. He was a man of vigorous mind and great force of character, and was held in high esteem not only for professional skill, but for business qualities." He was appointed town clerk in 1806, and held the office nineteen years, was town treasurer in 1807, 1825 and 1826, selectman in 1807, 1815, 1818 and 1819, and represented the town of Coventry in the General Assembly of Vermont for nine successive years, 1812–1820. "He is entitled to be remembered not only for his own abilities but as the father of sons who have won eminent distinction in another profession.†" He died at Coventry, Nov. 8, 1848, aged 74 years; his widow still surviving (1859).

William C.* Redfield, eldest son of Peleg (80), son of Capt. William (20), lived at Maromus or South Farms, the south-eastern parish of Middletown, Conn., until he was 14 years of age, when he was apprenticed to a saddler and harness-maker in Upper Middletown, now Cromwell, Conn. After the expiration of his apprenticeship he worked for some years at his trade in Cromwell, gradually combining with it the small business of a country merchant. An experimental enterprize in steam navigation led to his removal to the city of New York in 1824, where he organized a line of steam boats and barges on the Hudson river, which was the foundation of steam freight transportation on that river. His mechanical taste and engineering skill here found ample scope, and many improvements in steam boilers, in paddle wheels, and in the framing of hulls were introduced by him, to general favor. In this employment he continued until his death. The first introduction of rail roads into this country excited in him a lively interest. In a pamphlet published by him in 1828, he was the first to propose "a great railway from the Atlantic to the Mississippi," and he therein warmly advocated the construction of a rail road over the very route now occupied by the N. Y. and Erie R. R., and by the chain of rail roads from Dunkirk to Rock Island on the Mississippi. He was also instrumental in urging the construction of the Harlem, the Hartford and New Haven and the Hudson River rail roads, and in the latter company he was for some years an active and useful director. At an early period (1821) his attention was turned to the peculiar phenomena of the storms of the Atlantic coast, and the leisure hours of the last twenty-five years of his life were mainly employed in investigating the laws of storms, and in establishing on a solid basis of evidence, his great discovery of the combined rotary and progressive movement of storms. He received the honorary degree of A. M. from Yale College in 1839, and was the first president of the American Association for the Advancement of Science, at its session in Philadelphia in 1843. He continued to be a regular attendant upon the sessions of the association, taking an active part in the discussions upon physical science, especially in the departments of meteorology and geology. For a fuller biographical sketch, by Prof. Olmsted, see American Journal of Science, Vol. xxiv of second series, p. 355, and Proceedings of Montreal Meeting of American Association for Advancement of Science.†

* His baptismal name was William simply. The C. was assumed on his coming of age to distinguish him from two other William Redfields, contemporary in the same town, and stood for Convenience, as he used playfully to say.

† See appendix N, for a list of his published papers.

He married, 1st, Oct. 15, 1814, ABIGAIL WILCOX, daughter of Eliphalet and Abigail [Shepard] Wilcox* of Upper Middletown. She died May 12, 1819, and he married, 2d, November 23, 1820, LUCY WILCOX, daughter of Seth and Hannah [Willcox] Wilcox† of Stockbridge, Mass., and cousin of his first wife. She died September 14, 1821. He married, 3d, December 9, 1828, JANE WALLACE, daughter of William Wallace, merchant of New York, originally from Sanquhar, Scotland. Mr. Redfield died at New York city, February 12, 1857, in his 68th year, and was interred near the southern slope of Ocean Hill, in Greenwood Cemetery.

Samuel Redfield, second son of Peleg (80), son of Capt. William (20), removed from Middletown, Conn., in 1810, and joined his mother and younger brothers and sisters, who, in 1806, had emigrated to Randolph, Portage county, Ohio, where he also settled and aided in subduing the wilderness and became an extensive farmer. In May, 1812, he volunteered to serve in Capt. Campbell's company, which, on the 1st July, was ordered to march to the western frontier to aid in its protection against the savages. He assisted in the building of Fort Stephenson at Lower Sandusky, now called Fremont. He was taken prisoner at the river Raisin on the 18th August, 1812, on the occasion of Hull's surrender, and carried thence to Malden, whence he was sent to Cleveland on parole, and reached home sick on 4th Sept. About 1850 he removed to Ravenna in the same county, where he still resides. He married, Jan. 5, 1816, MARGARET ERWIN SHEWELL, b. Aug. 11, 1794, daughter of Rev. Henry and Mercy [Hazen] Shewell, who removed from Hackettstown, N. J., to Deerfield, Ohio, in 1802.

Children.

* "Died, on the 27th of May, at Versailles, Morgan county, John Redfield, aged seventeen years, eleven months and twenty-one days, son of Abraham Redfield, of Bates county, Mo.

He had almost closed a session of ten months at a collegiate institute in Boonville, over one hundred miles from the paternal roof which he so greatly prized. He had brilliantly completed a mathematical course, and had commenced the study of the languages, with a view to preparing himself for the ministry, for which he seemed peculiarly fitted. Amiable in his disposition, lovely in his deportment, and with all an intellect of the highest order, it was but reasonable to hope that much good might be accomplished through his instrumentality. Not only the parents and immediate friends, but the church mourns his early departure."

SUMMARY.

The family whose history we have now traced, from its first appearance on the western continent in 1639, through all its ramifications of descent, down to the present time, may be considered as a fair type in many respects, of those founded by the thousands of plain and substantial yeomen who formed so large a part of New England's early immigration. While many of those early founders were connected with English families of note or rank, the majority of the settlers came from the middle classes of England, and to trace their lineage beyond the period of emigration is often impossible. We have seen that this is true of the family in question; its origin seems to have been humble, even obscure, yet it is evident that our progenitors, however lowly their rank, brought with them those virtues and qualities which rendered them not unworthy of a place among a people, who were to subdue a wilderness, maintain their liberties, and found a new commonwealth. The earlier generations of the family inherited neither wealth nor station, hence those of their descendants who have acquired either, have, under Providence, been mainly indebted to their own industry, energy and perseverance, and the large number of "self-made men" enumerated in these pages, amply illustrates the truth of this position.

In looking back to the earlier generations of the family, which are those in which any peculiar bent or predilection would be most obvious, we see rather more than usual of that restless, roving spirit, which is said to be our national characteristic. James, the only male of the second generation, was, as we have seen, not long a resident in any one place, and of his grandchildren and great grand-children, a large proportion followed the sea, the more readily attracted to that life by their proximity to the sea-ports of Connecticut. Others of those generations and of later ones, became early settlers of the new states, and we think that an examination of the records herein detailed, will show that ours has been on the whole, emphatically a "pioneer" family, foremost in the work of reclaiming the wilderness, and peculiarly exposed to the privations and sufferings which always attend such a work, and which in the earlier history of our land were frequent and severe. Many of these pioneers lived to become patriarchs, and saw sons grow up around them, who in turn, have sought still newer soil, and have pushed forward to the prairies of Illinois, and to the oak openings of Wisconsin, whence still another generation is now going forth to people the richer lands of Iowa, Kansas and California. And it is gratifying to be able to state, that in the course of the investigation which has catalogued more than 1600 persons bearing the family surname, but a single instance has been found of conviction for crime, and that only two or three cases are known, where individuals have become a burthen to the public, one at least of these cases being occasioned by absolute physical and mental inability.

In the efforts and struggles attending the early conflicts of our country, first with the French in Canada, and afterwards with England, the mother country, the family largely participated, and it has furnished men for the later wars with England and with Mexico.

We close this record with a summary and classification of its results, so far as our materials suffice, believing that the generalizations thus obtained, will be of interest not to our kindred only, but to genealogists and statisticians.

The whole number of those bearing the family name, and herein enumerated, is 1644. The descendants in the female line, not born to the family surname, are probably still more numerous; but as it has not comported with our plan to trace these through their several generations to the present time (a task indeed almost impracticable), we have contented ourselves with recording only the first generation of descendants of daughters born Redfield, and in many cases we have been forced to leave even this record imperfect. But we have enumerated in this way 1179 descendants not bearing the family name, making the total number of individuals herein recorded 2823.

The following table shows the number of born Redfields in each sex and generation, and how many of each generation are supposed to be still living.

Generation.	Males.	Females.	Total.	Suppos'd Living.
I.....	1	1
II.....	1	3	4

IX.....	56	55	111	92	" 82.9 "
	870	774	1644	1047

The number of descendants not bearing the family name (following but one degree in each generation), is as follows :

Generation.	Males.	Females.	Not Designated.	Total.
III.....	5	4		9
IV.....	1			1
V.....	11	7		18

The facts we have collected in regard to the descendants in the female line are too imperfect to enable us to judge what proportion of these are now living.

If we combine the results of the above two tables, we have the following, showing the total number of each generation enumerated in these pages :

The 7th, 8th, and 9th generations are yet in course of development, which fact will sufficiently explain the diminished ratio of increase in the 7th and 8th generations, and the decrease in number in the 9th. The average geometrical ratio of increase in the first six generations of those born to the surname, is $3\frac{3}{10}$. Should the family continue that average of increase, we should have, eventually, of those bearing the name, 835 in the 7th generation, 2,755 in the 8th, and 9,090 in the ninth, while the 10th, as yet unborn, would reach about 30,000 ! This ratio, however, can not be expected to be maintained, but even with a ratio of 3, the tenth generation of born Redfields would be above 20,000.

It will be noticed in the above tables that in the last generation, the number of those not bearing the name exceeds those who bear it. This is owing merely to the fact the descendants of any given generation in the female line are born in advance of those of the male line, by reason of the earlier age at which daughters usually marry.

The proportion of male to female births in Redfield names has been as 113 to 100. In those not of the surname the proportion has been as 110 to 100. In both united as 111 to 100.*

Of the 1644 individuals of the Redfield name, we find only ten twin born, that is, five pairs. Of these, four pairs were all males, the remaining pair divided. Hence of 1639 births, only five were double—a proportion of only 1 in 328, which is much lower than usually obtains. If we had full and complete returns as to the date of birth, this number might, perhaps, be somewhat increased. Three twin births are recorded among children of Redfield daughters, but here the data are too imperfect to generalize from. In each of these two cases the births were females.

The largest number of children in one family has been 18. The largest number by one wife has been 14, of which there have been five instances.

Of the 366 individuals who composed the first six generations of the family name, about 58 are believed to have died under the age of 20, or 15.8 per cent. 308 are supposed to have reached maturity, or 84.2 per cent. Of these 308, 282 were married, or 91.6 per cent. The percentage of unmarried out of those reaching maturity was, therefore, 8.4. The percentage of married out of all born was 77.

Of born Redfields we have, up to the present time, 726 marriages recorded, making that number of families whose records, more or less complete, are found in this work. Taking them by generations, and enumerating the males and females, we have the following table :

Generation.	Males married.	Females married.	Total.
I.	1	1
II.	1	3	4
III.	2	2	4
IV.	12	5	17
V.	32	30	62
VI.	116	78	194
VII.	153	172	325
VIII.	53	66	119
	370	356	726

This gives the number of Redfield families, herein enumerated, 370, while we have nearly an equal number (356) who have lost the name by marriage. A portion of the seventh generation, and a still larger portion of the eighth, have not yet reached maturity, hence their appointed number of marriages have yet to be fulfilled, while of the ninth generation only the earlier born are just approaching what is, in this country, the usual marriageable age.

* The registry of the state of Connecticut showed the total number of births during the year 1857, to be in the proportion of 111.92 males to 100 females. In 1856 the proportion was 106.49 to 100.

We have one instance herein of the marriage of a female of the ninth generation, with the first known birth of the tenth generation, which, however, does not carry the family surname. The married daughters of the 7th and 8th generations at present exceed in number the married sons—for a reason before mentioned, to wit: the earlier age at which daughters marry.

While the past generations of the family seem to have attained to a fair average of longevity, there are no cases of very remarkable age to note, the longest life recorded being about 94 years.

The age of William Redfield the founder of the family is not known, but it is probable that he died not far from his fiftieth year.

James Redfield the only male of the second generation, is supposed to have died at about the age of 75; certainly he was under 77. His sisters died at an earlier age.

Of the third generation only one (Theophilus) is known to have exceeded 70 years. He died at the age of 77.

Of the fourth generation one died between 70 and 80 (73), and one between 80 and 90 (86).

Of the fifth generation twelve died between 70 and 80, six between 80 and 90, and four over 90. Of these four, two reached the age of 93, and one that of 94 years.

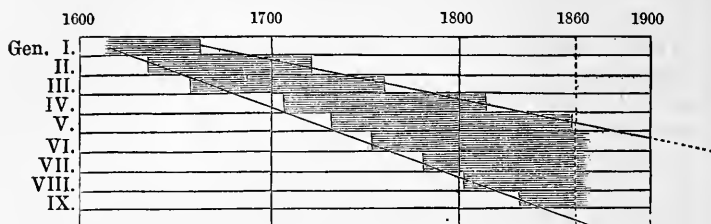

Of the sixth generation, about one-third is still with us. Of those who have departed, 16 were between 70 and 80, and 7 between 80 and 90. One at least of those remaining has reached the age of 90.

Some of the earlier born of the seventh generation (in female lines) have reached the age of eighty, but all later generations have been born within the present century.

In this connection, it may be interesting to note the range or extent in time, which each generation occupies. This is measured by counting from the date of the earliest birth to that of the latest death. Of course in following down the history of several generations of descendants from a single pair, this range must widen as we descend, as is apparent in the following table:

Generation.	Date of earliest birth.	Date of latest birth.	Date of latest death.	Range.
I,	say 1612	say 1612	1662	50 years.
II,	1636?	1649?	1723	87 "
III,	1657	1696	1759	102 "
IV,	1707	1743	1813	106 "
V,	1729	1773	1858	129 "
VI,	1750	1824	some living.	unfinished.
VII,	1779	1857	"	"
VIII,	1803	"	"
IX,	1833	"	"

Here we see that the range of time between the earliest and latest births in each generation gradually increases from 0 in the first, to 78 years in the seventh, and it is this divergence so to speak, in the date of births, that is the chief element in extending the range of each generation. The following diagram presents the same facts directly to the eye:

If we follow out the law which here seems indicated, the ninth generation which began to appear on the stage of life in 1833, will not have entirely passed off until about 210 years have elapsed, or about the year 2043.

The occupations in which the different members of the family were engaged have been greatly diversified. In regard to many of those of the earlier generations we have no information on this point, and of those of later generations, we have not always been able to specify the employment. From what imperfect information we have, we note the occupations of 283 individuals, as follows :

Occupation.	Generations.
	I.	II.	III.	IV.	V.	VI.	VII.	VIII.	Total.

As we might naturally expect from the general character of our population of New England origin, we find here the agricultural occupations predominating, forming more than one-third of the whole. Mechanical employments are next in frequency, though a growing preference for the more hazardous attractions of mercantile life is evident. As already mentioned, a nautical predilection was early manifested; but migration to the interior states, and the greater diversity of employment open at the present day, with other obvious causes, have drawn the later generations away from the sea. Only about one-tenth are found in the learned professions, and of these one-half are physicians.

The history of the migration from state to state, of the population of our country, from its first settlement down to the present time, is not without interest, and when once the vast extent of our territories shall be fully occupied by an active and industrious population, the historian will find pleasure and instruction in tracing the successive steps by which this occupation has been accomplished. The first emigrants from England planted themselves for the most part within the limits of the Plymouth and Massachusetts colonies, not extending far into the interior. Early explorations southward and westward made known the fine harbors of Narragansett bay, and of the Pequot country, and the rich meadows of the Connecticut, and these were occupied within the life time of the first generation, though not without severe and sanguinary contests with the aboriginal inhabitants. For a long time the settlements moved slowly along the coast of Connecticut, and northward along the valley of its river. Hemmed in by tribes of savages whose friendship was a dubious trust, and whom the emissaries of France soon converted into enemies, the further spread of the colonists was long retarded, yet by the middle of the eighteenth century, the population had spread into the interior of Massachusetts and Connecticut, and had even formed settlements within the western limits of New Hampshire, the Hampshire grants (Vermont), New York and New Jersey. After the revolutionary war the migration towards the interior was quickened, especially into New York state and into the northern portions of Vermont. The nineteenth century had hardly opened before Pennsylvania and Ohio began to be regarded as lands of promise for emigrants from New England and New York; and from that time onward, the westward march of colonization has been so steady and rapid, that those now in mid life have watched its progress from the banks of the Ohio to the shores of the Pacific.

Nothing can better illustrate this course of emigration, than the history of the descendants of any one of the New England families, and therefore we here present two tables, the first showing the number of individuals of each generation of this family, in connection with the state or territory in which they were born; the second exhibiting the same in connection with the state or territory which was their latest dwelling-place.

From an examination and comparison of the foregoing tables, we note the following facts in regard to the migration and spread of the family :

We see William Redfield emigrating from England, and after a brief abode in Massachusetts, establishing himself and family in Connecticut. In that colony at least part of his children were born, and also all of his descendants in the third, fourth and fifth generations, which brings us down as late as 1773. But of the 82 individuals of the fifth generation, all born in Connecticut, 23 removed from the state, and at the time of their death were distributed in six different states, much the largest number being found in New York. Hence, of the sixth generation, little more than half were born in Connecticut, the remainder in the states of Massachusetts, New Hampshire, Vermont, New York and New Jersey. Yet this generation, before it passes off, is spread into at least twenty states and territories, only about one-third remaining in Connecticut, another third residing in New York, and the remaining third distributed through the states, some even having reached Wisconsin and Nebraska. Of the seventh generation less than one-fifth have been born in Connecticut; New York state has given birth to nearly one-half, the remainder divided among thirteen states. This generation has already spread into nearly every state and territory, even as far as Utah and California. The eighth and ninth generations have yet to culminate, but long before the latter shall have matured, it will be represented in every habitable portion of our soil.

We may also note that of the births, there were, in the free states and territories, 1611, in the slave states, 33; and the latest residences were, in the free states and territories, 1581, in the slave states, 63—the proportion in the latter states being about 1 out of 25.

We close this summary with some tables, exhibiting the comparative spread of the two principal tribes of the family. Those who have had occasion to consult the preceding pages must have noticed that the descendants of Theophilus Redfield, or the Killingworth stock, have greatly outnumbered those of James Redfield of Fairfield. We here recapitulate the figures.

In the next table we present a comparative view of the spread of the different branches, originating from the sons of Theophilus and James. For convenience sake we designate the branches by the same index letters which have been used in the body of the work.

The above table may be considered as exhibiting a nearly correct estimate of the comparative number of the descendants of each branch followed down through the male line. But since the descendants in the female line are only traced one degree from their progenitress, the proportions of the total actual descendants of each branch may differ widely from the figures of the table. For instance, in the branch of Ebenezer Redfield, there were in the sixth generation seven males and twenty females born to the surname. Of the seven males, only two continued the lineage, while of the twenty females a large proportion were married and had families, and were their descendants followed downwards to the latest generation, the number would perhaps rival those of some of the other branches whose increase has been mostly in the male line.

Hoping that the facts which we have been enabled to collect and to present in these pages, may, notwithstanding the errors and imperfections, by which they may be accompanied, prove acceptable and interesting to our numerous kindred, we now close this task. The undertaking has called for patient labor, but it has been the "labor of love." Before the present century shall close, the number who will have borne our name will reach upwards of six thousand; hence it can hardly be expected that any one shall hereafter undertake to chronicle the whole of the rapidly increasing roll of the descendants of the William Redfield of 1640. But may we not hope that each separate branch will, in after generations, have its own historian, who will gather up the scattered threads which we must now leave, and so place them in the hands of those who come after.

1657, April 26. Richard Haughton† sells to "William Redfyn" "a parcel of land with a stone house upon it containing four acres more or less, in Pequot on the west side of the highway, bounded" &c.

Book of Deeds and Grants, 1652-1669.

1657-8, Jan. 25. "William Redfin hath given him sixe ackers of land to his house if it be there to be laid out on the back of his house to the swamp."

Ibid.

* In relation to an error which here exists in the original record, see note on p. 7.

† The house lot of "Thomas Bayley" or "Baylie" was next adjoining the lot of Richard Haughton, which lot Haughton here sells to Redfin.

1657-8. "William Redfin's" name occurs as witness to deeds of Jonathan Brewster to Benjamin Brewster. Ibid.

1659, Aug. 3. Thomas Baylie sells to Wm. Blomfield of Hartford, "house and land lying by it, six acres more or less with trees, fences, orchards," &c., "this land lying by the land of Goodman Redfield." The same deed proceeds, "as also I sell and make over to him two ackers of land lying upon the west end of Goodman Redfin's lot and running to the brooke." Witness my hand, The mark of B Thos. Baylie." Witnessed by William Thomson and William Redfin. Ibid.

1661, Dec. 12. Thomas Roach was married to Rebecca Redfin ye 12th of December. Record of Births, Deaths and Marriages.

166½, March 15. "William Redfin of New London" sells to Thomas Roach, "house and house lot containing twelve acres more or less, sixe* whareof I bought of Richard Houghton and the other which was given me by the town, having a highway on the east, west a swomp," &c. Ibid.

Thomas Roach, when he afterwards sold this place, described it as "the house and house lot that I bought of my father-in-law William Redfin."

1662, April 1. An instrument of indenture executed, of the following import: "I James Redfin of New-London in the jurisdiction of Connecticut, do with the consent of my fater and mother bynde myself unto Hugh Roberts of the same place, tanner, to doe him faithfull service for the space and terme of five yeeres from the day of the date hereof, provided he allow mee and yeerely pay unto me five pounds in good and marchandable pay and give mee good and comfortable board, lodging and washing and teach me the art and trade of tanning leather," &c.

Signed by James Redfin, William Redfin and Hugh Roberts.

Witnessed by Gershom Bulkley and Lucretia Brewster.

Ibid.

1663, June 9. At a town meeting held on this date, "Widdo Redfin" presented a request for a certain piece of land; and at a subsequent meeting. Sept. 16, 1663, it is recorded that "Widdo Redfin hath given her sixe ackers if it be there, not hindring the cartway next to Terrall's house lot."

Old Book of Town Affairs, &c.

Omitting reference to one or two other deeds of land in Bailey's neighborhood, where the name Redfin occurs, and also an obligation on the part of Bailey to pay a small annuity to Rebeckah Redfin, we quote further:

1665. March 2. A deed of Robert Loveland to John Stodder, of land which from its bounds was clearly in the neighborhood of the Redfins and Bayleys, is witnessed by "The mark of X Rebecca Redfield." "Old Book of Deeds and Grants."

This deed is recorded by a different clerk from the one that usually wrote the name Redfin.

1666. Oct. 6. On the New London Rate List of this date, the name of James Redfield appears, estimated at £3 0s. 2d. He is not on the list of 1667, and these two are the only rate lists of the town before 1700, that are extant.

* It appears from this deed that the four acres bought of Richard Haughton had grown into six. This was not uncommon in those days when measurements of land were vague and always ample, sometimes doubling the nominal extent.

1666. Dec. 29. Rebeckah Redfin sells the six acres given her by the town next to Terrall's lot, signing her mark Rebeckah X Redfin.

Old Book of Town Affairs.

1667. Widdow Rebecca Redfin complained before the Court, that Alexander Pygan had "enticed away her daughter Judith's affections contrary to the laws of this corporation."

Records of Court.

1667. June 17. "Alexander Pygan of Norwich, Old England, was married unto Judith, the daughter of William Redfin of New London, ye 17th of June."

Record of Births, Deaths and Marriages.

The Goodman Redfield and Goodman Redfin mentioned above, in Thomas Bayley's deed, must refer to one and the same person. If not, who was Goodman Redfield? No deed or grant, or even casual allusion before this period, points to any such resident unless we suppose this identity. He is moreover, located precisely upon the land registered to William Redfin, in the immediate vicinity of the latter's son-in-law, Thomas Bailey.

For these gleanings from the New London Records, and for many useful suggestions, we are indebted to the kindness and the research of Miss F. M. Caulkins, the historian of New London. Among the antiquarians of New England she holds a high place. Noted for cautious sagacity in investigation, and for extensive acquaintance with the details of the early life-scenes of New England, her opinions must command the highest respect. Her local familiarity with the lands and bounds and names of settlers, and the entries in the old records, fully "persuade her that there could not have been a Redfin and a Redfield living in the same neighborhood at the same time, owning apparently the same land; and also subsequently, a widow Rebecca Redfin and a widow Rebecca Redfield, coevals in the same neighborhood, both making their marks for a signature." In corroboration we may also plead the probability that the James Redfield who is rated in 1666, at a low amount (as one just beginning the world would be likely to be), is identical with the James Redfin who was apprenticed in 1662, especially in connection with the fact that Hugh Roberts, to whom the latter was bound, broke up his establishment in 1666, thus, in all probability, throwing his apprentice upon the world.

Since the above was prepared for the press, J. Hammond Trumbull, the accomplished antiquarian of Connecticut, has placed in our hands the following extracts, from a manuscript diary of Lieut. Thomas Minor, lately brought to light:

"Nov. 15, 1654. Goodman Redfild was making our backe for our chimibly."

"Nov. 22. " Our backe of our chimibly was ended; goodman Redfild had 22s. and 6d. for doing the stone wall."

Lieut. Minor had recently removed from (what is now) New London, some nine or ten miles eastward, towards Pawcatuck, and the work done by "Redfield," was upon his new house.

These trivial entries in the good Lieutenant's journal, are to us of interest, as showing that our ancestor bore the name of Redfield among his neighbors, at the very time the town clerk was accustomed to record him as Redfin, and also as showing the nature of his occupation, on which point we had previously no evidence.

C. Pages 8 and 9.

Since this work has been in press, the kindness of L. M. Pease, Esq. of Edgartown, Martha's Vineyard, has put us in possession of a copy of a land grant to James Redfield, found among the records of that island. The document shows that James Redfield was not only an inhabitant of Tisbury in 1671, as mentioned in the text, but that he was also a house-holder from 1671 to at least as late as 1673, which facts strengthen the probability of his identity with the James Redfield of New Haven, in 1670, and of Saybrook in 1676.

We here subjoin a copy of the instrument :

"The Lands and Accomodations "of James Redfield " which lyeth in the township of Takymmy or Tisbury on the Vineyard as follows : One half house lot which containeth twenty-five acres, lying on the east side of the brook where his dwelling-house is this present year, one thousand six hundred and seventy and three bounded with the brook on the west, and Joseph Dogget's half lot on the north, and Isaac Robinson's lot on the south, being twenty-five rods in breadth, and running in length eight score rods easterly from the brook, being twenty-five acres more or less ; and half the sixth part of the neck by John Eddy's, of which half the fifth lot is James Redfield's, lying on the south side of Joseph Dogget's half lot, lying across the neck at the north, is divided to every man's share contained in the neck, as before spoken in the order of division of the three necks, baring date February the first, 1671.

And the two and thirtyth part of all undivided Lands, whether purchased or that may be purthesed.

This is the Lands and Accomodations of James Redfield, but to be remembered the purthes not yet paid.

Letter from Capt. Robert Chapman to the Council at Hartford.

WILL OF THEOPHILUS REDFIELD. Approved March 6, 1759.

In the name of God Amen. This twenty-second of September, A. D. 1738 I Theophilus Redfield of Killingworth in the county of New London in the Colony of Connecticut in New England, being in a comfortable state of health, and of sound mind and memory, thanks be given unto God therefor, Calling to mind the mortality of my Body, and knowing that it is appointed for all men once to Die; Do make and ordain this my Last will & Testament that is to say Principally & first of all I give & Recommend my Soul into the hands of God that gave it, and my Body I Recommend to the Earth to be buried in Decent Christian Burial at the Discretion of my Executors nothing Doubting but at the General Recurrence I shall Receive the Same again by the mighty power of God; and as touching such worldly Estate wherewith it hath pleased to bless me in this life, I Give Demise and Dispose of the Same in the following manner & form, my Just Debts and funeral Charges being first paid—

Imprimis I Give and bequeath unto Priscilla my Dearly beloved wife the use and Improvement of one third part of my Real Estate, During the Term of her natural Life; and I give unto her one third part of my personal Estate to be at her Dispose forever.

Item I give and bequeath to my nine Sons all my Lands and Real Estate to be so Divided among them that my Eldest Son shall have a Double portion thereof, and the Rest of my Sons Each of them a single Share to be to them their heirs and assigns forever. Reserving only to my wife the Improvement of one Third part During Life as abovesd, my Said Sons being Daniel, Richard, Ebenezer, Theophilus, Peleg, George, William, Josiah and James.

Item What I have already given or may hereafter give to any of my sd sons by Deed of Gift is to be accounted as part of their shares or portions of my sd Lands or Real Estate; as also what I have Layd out or shall Lay out to help any of them in building or purchasing to be accounted as part of their Portions; so that the Lands and Real Estate which I shall leave at my Decease to be so Divided among them as to Include those Gifts in the abovesd portions; and if any of my Sons shall Decease before me, their Issue if any be shall their share; and if any of them Die without Issue the surviving sons shall all sd Real Estate Divided among them in proportion as abovesd.

Item I Give and bequeath to my four Daughters all the Remainder of my personal Estate to be so Divided among them as to make all their Shares or portions of my Estate to be Equal Including what I have given or may give to any of them in the time of my Life, my Daughters being Elizabeth, Lydia, Priscilla and Jane.

Lastly I do hereby constitute and appoint my Loveing wife Priscilla and my Loveing Son Daniel Redfield, to be my Executors of this my last Will and Testament, and do hereby Revoke and Disanul all former Wills and Testaments and Executors by me at any time before named or made, hereby Declaring this and no other to be my Last Will and Testament.

In Witness whereof I have hereunto set my hand and seal the day of the date above written. THEOPHILUS REDFIELD. [L. s.]

The latter probably received it from Mrs. Priscilla [Redfield] Bradley (17) of Guilford, the third daughter of Theophilus and Priscilla. It may interest the matrons of the present day to know the fashion of spoon used by their great grandmothers, and we therefore subjoin a front and back view of the one above mentioned, showing fac-simile of the marking and the exact size. The fac-simile of Daniel Redfield's autograph given in the text is taken from a certificate of election of a captain of militia in 1741, found among the state papers at Hartford. Militia, Vol. III, folio 113.

The document, with its antiquated phraseology may have some interest for his descendants, and it is therefore here subjoined:

"To the Honourable, the Governour and General Court now sitting at New Haven, October ye 21st 1741.

These come to inform you that I lately Received an Order from his Honour ye Governour to lead the second Company of Soldiers in Killingworth (it being ye Seventh Company in ye Seventh Regiment) to ye Choice of a Captain and such other Officers as should be needfull; and according to said Order upon ye 21st day of this instant October I led ye said Company to ye Choice of a Captain, and Lieut. John Steevens was chosen Captain by a Great Majority by forty-six votes and ye other votes were but five and it seems to be to good satisfaction of said Company and I pray that he may be Commissionated Accordingly.

Certifyd by us, { DAVID BUELL, Major.

PART II.

Containing names other than Redfield. In this part may be sought all descendants not bearing the family name; also Redfield daughters, who have, by marriage, acquired other names; also all names incidentally mentioned in the text. Names of children who are supposed to have died under ten years of age, are omitted.
